

Almire Major Smith Memorial Scholarship

This scholarship was established by the grandchildren of Mr. Almire Smith to honor his legacy and further champion his support for higher education. Mr. Smith served in World War II, worked for East Carolina University as Housekeeping Supervisor, and was an avid supporter of his church and community. Mr. Smith was a proud father of eight, who ensured his children achieved the education he didn't, by motivating them to go on to colleges and universities throughout North Carolina. The grandchildren would like to continue this tradition by bestowing an annual scholarship to an African American attending a community college or college/university in North Carolina. This individual must show support for community service, and educational prowess. JROTC membership is preferred but not a qualification.

Criteria:

1. African American: Male or Female
2. Preferred to be a member of JROTC but not a qualification
3. Must be attending a community college, or college/university in NC
